

Tax Appeal Commissioner (Temporary)

For the Purpose of the Income Tax Acts

Tax Appeal Commissioners decide on matters that are in dispute between taxpayers and the Office of the Revenue Commissioners involving a range of taxes and duties. They are appointed by the Minister for Finance.

These roles represent an exceptional opportunity for high calibre individuals with significant taxation experience. A panel will be formed from this process from which a number of temporary vacancies may be filled on a fixed term contract for a minimum of two years.

The ideal candidates will have:

- significant senior level experience in the field of taxation in either the public or private sector;
- the ability to analyse and evaluate large amounts of complex legal and technical information;
- excellent judgment and objective decision making skills;
- recognition, either publicly or within their own professional area, as an individual of proven integrity and independence.

Qualification as a barrister or solicitor, or qualifications relevant to the requirements of the role, would be an advantage.
