

Chartered Tax Adviser (CTA) Hunt Scholarship

For recently qualified Solicitors & Barristers

The natural synergy between tax and law

Tax is grounded in law and one of the key skills of a Chartered Tax Adviser (CTA) is the ability to provide tax advice through the interpretation of tax legislation, case law and precedents.

Many qualified solicitors and barristers complement their existing qualifications by completing the Chartered Tax Adviser (CTA) qualification - Ireland's leading tax qualification. Not only does it provide enhanced career opportunities by giving you a competitive edge, it will give you the skills and knowledge to interact with other tax professionals.

Legal professionals and the Chartered Tax Adviser (CTA) qualification

Once I qualified as a solicitor, I started my studies for the Chartered Tax Adviser (CTA) qualification. In the Matheson tax department and the tax industry as a whole, this is considered an essential qualification and I knew how much it would enhance my knowledge and skills.

I completed a Bachelor of Civil Law and I am currently undertaking the Degree of Barrister-at-Law in Kings Inns. The Chartered Tax Adviser (CTA) qualification prepares you for a career in tax, as it covers tax technical knowledge for all tax heads, while teaching you how to read and interpret the legislation.

Previous Scholarship Winners

The Hunt Scholarship was a turning point in my career. As a young Barrister, I went into the process looking for a specialisation to set myself apart from my peers. It opened the door to so much more: six months' experience in an International Tax practice; a job offer; and, 5 years' experience as a Senior Associate at a leading Irish law firm with a focus on Tax litigation. When I moved to the US in 2018, my Tax background was very well received. Now, as Special Counsel at a large US law firm, I regularly field queries from clients and colleagues with Irish and EU tax issues. It has been quite the journey. It began the day I completed the application form.

It was so encouraging that employment figures among qualified Chartered Tax Advisers (CTA) are high. The Chartered Tax Adviser (CTA) qualification offers great opportunities and is a great accompaniment to my qualification as a solicitor.

Edel Butler
Solicitor

Having studied tax at undergraduate level, I knew that the CTA qualification would greatly complement my practise as a barrister. In order to specialise in areas such as Revenue law and employment law, the CTA qualification is essential. As many legal transactions have tax implications, being a CTA will enable me to better serve my clients.
